Denied a divorce, she goes to live with her mother while he returns home to his father and their daughter Termeh, SARINA FARHADI. Into their household comes Razieh, SAREH BAYAT, a woman from a conservative, religious working class background. She arrives each day with her daughter to help look after the old man.

An incident happens and Nader finds himself in a legal battle with Razieh and her excitable husband Hodjat (Shahab Hosseini).
